The Killers artwork gets limited release

Comments ▾

Two years to the day after their Day And Age album was released The Killers' specially commissioned artwork for it is getting a limited release of it's own.

Aswell as designing the cover image, voted best album cover of 2008 by Rolling Stone, British artist Paul Normansell created individual portraits of the band for use in the video for their single Human (and on the subsequent cover of the cd single).

Lead singer Brandon Flowers approached Normansell after seeing his mosaic-inspired portrait of Kate Moss in GQ magazine. He has previously revealed his inspiration for the album art work came from Beatles album portraits.

Now fans will be able to snap up a print of The Killers as his 'colour spot' style portraits go on sale for the first time in a limited run from November 25th.

Guide prices for the 150 limited edition pieces of Paul Normansell's Killers collection start from £495 - £2995. More details online at <http://www.thekillersart.com>.
